I have a fond memory of walking around the halls of Pierrefonds Comprehensive High School (PCHS) the year it opened. Yes, I've been around a while.

We had been students without a home for a couple of years and when PC opened its doors, I was lucky to be one of the first students to attend the school in grade 9.

I didn't realize then that the lessons learned there would help send me on my way to my dream job of being on the radio.

The seeds of learning and telling good stories were memorably planted by the great teachers who displayed patience, passion and kindness with me back then. Let's just say as I student, I presented these great teachers with a challenge.

I have such gratitude for Ms. Bunny Roberts, Wendell McDougall, the late Joan Blumer and many more whose lessons and dedication infused me with a passion for history and literature that were an integral part of learning the craft I chose.

A tip of the cap to PCHS and everyone there!
